Chet Tra, a worker, said that they came to Mr Hun Sen’s house this morning after their negotiation with the company and government officials failed to offer them due payments after their factory closure.

“We ask Prime Minister Hun Sen to intervene in our case because the company has yet to pay us in two points,” she said.

On June 23, Hana garment factory announced an immediate closure of its business operation and promised to pay employees in line with legal procedure.

Hana workers demanded they be paid last month’s working salary, payments in lieu of unused annual leave, seniority indemnity, compensation and damages.

The workers claimed that the company only agreed to pay them last month’s salary, payment in lieu of unused annual leave and seniority indemnity.

Online influencers need to exercise self-control

Had a woman surnamed Xu, who has tens of millions of followers on social networking sites, marked a video clip in which she claimed she found a Grade 1 student's winter holiday homework in a restaurant in Paris, as "fictional", the story would have made for a good, even laughable, joke.

Young Cambodian explain their love of tattoos

More and more people in Cambodia are getting tattoos. They view them as art, fashion, and memories of their loved ones. At the same time the older generation still regard people with tattoos as gangers.

'Woody Woodpecker Goes to Camp' leaves viewers confused

Ha ha ha ha ha!!! Yes, the good old Woody Woodpecker is back in a Netflix original film that is all about fusion: animation in live action, which opened with the iconic Universal Studio globe opening. The result is, well, a mediocre project that takes common sense for granted.

A legend begins in 'The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare'

Based upon recently declassified files of the British War Department, and inspired by true events, The Ministry of Ungentlemanly Warfare is an action-comedy that tells the story of the first-ever special forces organisation formed during World War II by UK Prime Minister Winston Churchill and a small group of military officials, including James Bond author Ian Fleming.
